1. INTRODUCTION

The main source of data for the demography statistics is Population Census which is conducted every ten years. Population Censuses in Indonesia have been conducted in 1961, 1970, 1980, 1990, and the latest census in the year of 2000. The 2000 Population Census was conducted on June 2000.

Besides Population Census, demographic data can be obtained from Intercensal Population Survey. This survey is conducted in the year between two censuses. The 2000 Population Module Survey was conducted to provide the need for various demographic data which are not covered in the 2000 Population Census. Data collected in this survey consist of demography, family planning and labor force. The demographic data consist of live births and children still living which are the basic data for calculating infant and child mortality, expectation of life and fertility. There are also questions on participation in the family planning. The labour force questions consist of labour force participation, main industry, occupational, employment status, hours of work and income of the employee. Questions on education consist of school participation, educational attainment, and the ability to read and write. Additional tables such as life time migration, recent migration, and maternal death by province are presented for National Publication.

The 2000 Population Module Survey was conducted in all provinces in Indonesia, with the sample of 203,008 households. The field enumeration was in February, 2000. Most of data processing were done in the provinces. For Aceh, Lampung, DKI Jakarta, West Nusa Tenggara, East Nusa Tenggara, North Sulawesi, Maluku and Irian Jaya, the data were proceed in Central BPS. However, data for D.I. Aceh and Maluku can not be published due to the unrepresentative documents.

a. Enumeration Areas (EAs) Selection

The sample frame to select the EAs for the 2000 Population Module Survey is the same with the EAs for 2000 Susenas. The sample frame is differentiated into Urban EAs and Rural EAs. The sample frame for urban is all the EAs in the urban areas, while the sample frame for rural is the combination between Master Sampling Frame (KCI) 1 and Master Sampling Frame (KCI) 2. These two sample frames are constructed from the Master File Desa. The probability Proportional to Size was used to select the EAs, that is for each EA has same probability with its household size.

b. Formation and Selection of Segmen Group and Households

Sample frame for Segmen Group selection is the list of Segmen Groups which were constructed by supervisors under the National Instructors guidance during the training. The selected segmen group is the same segmen group selected for the 2000 Susenas. The next step, is the selection of 16 households for the 2000 Population Module Survey.

c. Recruitment and Training for Survey Workers

The Survey Workers for Population Module Survey were the same persons for Susenas. Survey workers were:

1. National Instructor, is the experienced and trained Instructor from BPS Statistics Indonesia and Regional BPS Offices.
2. Supervisor, is the chief of Population Subdivision or staff of Regional BPS Offices or Statistics Officer at the subdistrict level (mantri statistik)
3. Enumerator, is the staff of Regional BPS Offices or Mantri Statistics or temporary personnel (mitra statistik).
